This News is authorized to announce
DESSIA LUCAS
as a candidate for Police Judge of the City of Paris, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary, August 22nd, 1901.

For President in 1904—Winfield Scott Schley.

This Ozar of Russian has named his infant daughter Anastasia. That is a mean way of getting even with her for not being a boy.

An astronomer claims to have discovered that the sun is losing its heat. Ninety-nine out of every hundred people to-day will say he is a liar, pure and simple.

TEDDY has been dunned. Somebody has made him believe that it is up to him to do the quiet and dignified act, in order to show that it would be safe to trust him with a Presidential nomination.

The statement that the Perry relief expedition is impeded in its progress by masses of ice will have a tendency to cause the formation of numerous other relief parties throughout the United States.

SENATOR BLACKBURN says: "The political situation in Kentucky could not be brighter for the Democrats. We will carry the State by at least thirty thousand and have a majority in the Legislature of at least twenty-five."

REAR ADMIRAL SCHLEY has written a formal letter to the Secretary of the Navy calling attention to the attacks on him in connection with the Santiago campaign and Secretary Long will name a Court of Inquiry to investigate.

"HISTORIAN" MACLAY has written himself down a liar and bootlick, and his abuse of Admiral Schley has merely served to raise that officer in the estimation of every man who believes in fair play and in giving credit where credit is due.

The Carlisle Democrat, in an obituary notice, says: "But, alas! the grim reaper, in the prime of young womanhood, cut the thread of life," etc. It will make death ten times easier to know that the grim monster is a young woman. Every one has supposed him to be a grizzled old man.

A New York judge has rendered a decision in a case in that city which stamps him as a fearless judge, and which sets aside all precedents since the days of Adam and Eve. He says: "No woman has a right to go through her husband's pockets any more than the husband has the right to go through his wife's pockets." The idea!

The idea for history being written to order for the contemptible naval clique that has hounded Admiral Schley since the beginning of the war with Spain finds few defenders and deserves fewer. MacLAY, the Brooklyn Navy Yard clerk, who wrote the blackguard attack on Schley, is not the man to jump on. He was merely the dirty tool of a dirty clique. Congress will fall in its duty if it does not go to the bottom of this mess.

BRER HIRAM DULLEY, editor of the Flemingsburg Times-Democrat, and Brer Judge Wyatt, editor of the Ewing Enquirer, both old enough to know better, are fighting and scratching away at each other like a couple of cats hung across a clothes line by their tails. Up to the present time Brer Dulley seems to have decidedly the best of the argument. Here's what he says in answer to an article by Brer Wyatt, criticizing his personal appearance:
"In other words, steal something from the county to buy himself some clothes. No, thank you. Hiram Dulley professes to wear such clothing as he can get honestly, even if they are cheap and lack the style so dear to the heart of the man milliner of Ewing."

Timid Woman, Caliste Brute.
There is an F street real estate man whose pretty home is in one of the pleasantest streets in the older part of town. He is just an ordinary man, with no particular sympathy for the fears of nervous women; he has been married 15 years, and his wife is one of those women who fairly revel in all sorts of painful imaginings and frightful forebodings. She always makes her when she starts on a journey, and she never fails to forgive all her enemies before she trusts herself behind any kind of a horse. There has not been a night in all the 15 years of her married life that she hasn't either smelled smoke or heard burglars. Last week, in the middle of one night, the husband felt the familiar pinch which for 15 years has caloused his arm. He heard the familiar voice say the same old words:
"Oh, Charles! Do get up! I smell smoke!"

As usual, for after 15 years of that sort of thing even an ordinary man learns not to argue with a woman, he climbed obediently out of bed and went to the window. The street below was full of people, and a fire engine was puffing away at the corner.
"Oh, Charles!" called the wife. "Is the house on fire?"

Fifteen years have made Charles' feelings as callous as his arm.
"Yes," said he brutally; "thank goodness the house is on fire at last. Now perhaps you'll stop worrying!"—Washington Post.

Daniel O'Connell's Fees.
In the National Library of Ireland is the fee book of Daniel O'Connell. This volume, in its 100 pages or so of parallel columns, laboriously prepared by the hand of the liberator himself, shows in pounds, shillings and pence his early struggles. O'Connell was called to the Irish bar in 1798—the year of the rebellion—and seven days later he got his first brief, from a brother-in-law, who retained him to do a declaration on a promissory note. The only other business he got that year was also given him by a kinsman—a cousin—and it was of the same kind. The fee on each occasion was £1 2s. 6d. It was one of his earliest cases that O'Connell made the retort that attracted attention to him. He was cross-examining an awkward witness, who declared that he had drunk nothing but his share of a pint of whisky. "On your oath, now," thundered the young counsel, "was not your share all but the pewter?"

O'Connell's fee book is an interesting record of his rapid rise in the profession. For the first year, as we have seen, his income amounted to only £25 6d. Next year he earned over £50, and the year after he made over £400. According to memoranda made in his own handwriting his income in 1803 was £495, and in the following year, £778, £840, £1,077, £1,713, £2,138, £2,739, £2,951, £3,047 and £3,988 respectively.

Anticipated.
He was a Scotch minister in a small country parish, and he was somewhat put to it for fresh pasture to feed his flock. One day, however, he thought himself that he had never thoroughly exhausted the subject of Jonah, and his heart rejoiced. Jonah and the whale was a sort of thing whereby you could easily draw out a sermon its allotted two hours. He was in full career and had reached triumphantly the anatomical peculiarities of the case.
"As what fish do you think it was?" he cried in stentorian tones. "Ablins ye think it was a haddie? Na, na. It could nae be a haddie for to tak a big mon like you in his belly. Aweel, ablins ye think it was a salmon, but I tell ye na, na. It was nae a salmon, for deed I doubt if they ever see salmon yonder. Aweel, ablins ye're thinking it was a big cod!"

Here an aged and weary voice piped up from the body of the church:
"Ablins it was a whale!"
"An the deil has ye, Maggie Macfarlane, for takin the word out of the mouth o' God's meenister!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Contented Reproof.
Occasionally there is to be found a proprietor of a secondhand bookstore who is something more than the nature of his business would seem to indicate. He regards his old and rare volumes rather as a collection than a stock of goods and experiences a pang when he parts with one.
A flippant young man dropped into a secondhand bookstore kept by a man of this kind.
Taking down several choice old books from the shelves, he fingered them carefully and replaced them. They happened to treat of abstruse subjects and did not appeal to him.
"Are any of these books for hire?" he asked curiously.
"No, young man," sharply answered the proprietor. "They are for lore!"—St. Louis Republic.

Fires in New York.
Fires in all parts of New York city are most common between 8 p. m. and are least common between the hours of 6 and 7 p. m. Between 6 and 6 in the morning there are very few fires; between 6 and 7 there are the fewest, but after 7 o'clock the number steadily increases until 9 o'clock at night, when a rapid diminution begins, the increase being again resumed at 7 o'clock.—New York Sun.

One Man to Be Saved.
"I have determined," said the sweet young thing, "to devote myself to the cause of temperance."
"In what way?"

"Well," she answered, "recently published statistics show that there is less dissipation among married men than among single men."—Chicago Times Herald.

Both Were Surprised.
The third time I changed cars at the Union railroad station and lunched at the little grill-room just up the street the jolly little proprietor recognized me as a regular patron and his best pet to entertain me while my special pot of coffee was coming to a boil.
"Notice that fellow who just went out?" he asked, chuckling contentedly to himself.
I hadn't noticed particularly, but I knew it would be disconcerting to admit, so I nodded encouragingly, says a writer in the New York Herald.
"Well," he continued, "that's Jim Smith—Long Jim Smith they call him—conductor of the Erie, and, say, he's laying for me. Greatest practical joker you ever saw. Always getting jokes on me, and I never could get back on him until last week, and then I was about as much surprised as he was."

"I was coming down the street and saw a crowd gathered around some Salvation Army singers. Long Jim was away on the edge of the crowd, standing on his tiptoes so he could see over the heads of the rest. He had his back to me, and, sticking out from under his arm, was a big bag of lemons. I saw my chance, and I sneaked quietly behind him, hauled off and gave that bag of lemons an awful swipe with my cane."

Here the little man went off into an uncontrollable fit of laughter over the remembrance.
He laughed till his sides shook and then he said:
"Well?" I queried. "Scattered the lemons all about, I suppose?"
"Scattered! Ho, ho, ho! He! He! He! He! Hum! Well, I should say so. But they wasn't lemons; they was eggs."

The Pie Eaters.
Pie in New England is served in many queer ways, especially the kind of all pies, the royal mince. Not long ago there appeared a sign in the station of staid, crooked and correct Boston—a sign bearing the strange device, "Hot Mince Pie and Cream." This is a mild combination compared with one that was served in this city at a midnight supper. A Welsh rabbit was being made, and there were some who did not care to eat it on crack; so, to feast in the house, for it was the fire's evening out. A mince pie was found lurking in the ice chest and pressed into service. The rabbit was spread over the pie, and both vanished in a short time. Those who ate are still afraid in the dark, for they can imagine that the same things are coming for them again as came during their dreams of that wild, weird night.
A local minister tells a pie story on himself that is a "corker." He is a delicate man, and his wife was down on pie for him and voted it for family use. Once he went to a convention in Pittsfield, and a dinner was served at which there were seven kinds of pie. The minister took a "little of each, please," and never enjoyed himself so much in his life.—Baltimore American.

Why Bees Work in Darkness.
Bees go out all day gathering honey and work at night in the hive, building their combs as perfectly as if an electric light shone there all the time. Why do they prefer to work in the dark? It is often asked. Every one knows that honey is a liquid with no solid sugar in it. After standing it gradually assumes a crystalline appearance and granulates and ultimately becomes a solid mass.
Honey has been experimentally inclosed in well corked flasks, some of which were kept in perfect darkness, while the others were exposed to the light. The result was that the portion exposed to the light soon crystallized, while that kept in the dark remained unchanged.
Hence we see why the bees are so careful to obscure the glass windows which are placed in their hives. The existence of the bees depends on the liquidity of the saccharine food presented to them, and if light were allowed access to this it would in all probability prove fatal to the inmates of the hive.—Weekly Bouquet.

Took Mutton.
He was a station hand in from a three months' spell of work, during which he had tasted no other meat than mutton; also he stuttered badly. The result of the evening was that the mutton at the hotel dinner table, though the hotel mutton made him shiver.
Said the host, "What will you try, Mr. Straps?"
"Eagorly, I'll try a b-bit of t-t-t." The word floored him. Again, "G-give me a b-bit t-t-t." Then, red faced and disgusted: "Oh, h-hang it! Give me some b-blooming mutton! I h-hate it, but I can't s-s-say it, anyhow!"—Sydney Bulletin.

They Changed.
A Vienna paper relates an anecdote of the painter Makart, who was sometimes as taciturn as Von Moltke. One evening a dinner he sat for an hour next to the scotchite Josephine Gzell, Meyer without volunteering a word. Finally she lost patience and exclaimed, "Well, dear master, suppose we change the subject."

Knew When to Go.
"Give us proof of your boasted wisdom," cried a lot of chattering magpies to the owl.
"I will," he said and flew away.—Philadelphia Times.

It is doubtful if any other fruit could be found at once so common, cheap and delicious as dates. They are most healthful and excellent for children.
The Abyssinian warriors always honor their king by a band escort of 45 trumpets wherever he goes.
The odd shillings.
There is very little difference between a pound and a guinea; only a shilling, and yet the business man insists that the shilling shall be considered. After Thackeray's series of lectures on the four Georges had been delivered in London, Willert Beale says that he called upon the novelist in Onslow square with a check for £250.
"What's this, W. B.?" cried Thackeray, reading the check. "Pounds? Our agreement says guineas, and guineas I must be." "You are aware that the lectures so far have involved very heavy losses," said Beale apologetically.
"That's not my affair," said Thackeray. "I don't know what occult means you have to protect yourself from loss. Guineas, W. B. I guinea it must be, and nothing else. I must have the shillings!"
And the shillings were sent him immediately.

A Proper Apology.
"How many cranks live in this street besides yourself?"
"That's an insult, sir!"
"Oh, well, I apologize. How many cranks live in this street including yourself?"—Chicago Times Herald.

Does It Pay To Buy Cheap?
A cheap remedy for coughs and colds all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the only remedy that has been introduced in all civilized countries with severe throat and lung troubles, "Boswell's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try one bottle. Recommended by all first druggists in the world. Get Green's Prize Almanac.—W. T. Brooks.
